

USGBC Maryland presents a timely briefing to learn the inside track to the City's green building standards – the alternative to LEED; the super commissioning agent; and "hammer fees." This is the only place to get a step ahead. The regulations implementing the mandatory Baltimore Green Building Law, scheduled to be released November 1, 2009 will be in effect December 1, 2009. These regulations will impact most private new building and major renovation projects over 10,000 square feet.

Come learn from the key government players who are tasked with implementing the new program:

Michael Braverman, Deputy Commissioner, Code Enforcement, Housing and Community Development

Nadya Morgan, Project Manager, Baltimore Green Building Standards, Department of Housing and Community Development

Bronwyn Phillips, Department of Housing and Community Development

Sarah Zaleski, Director of Sustainability, Baltimore City Office of Sustainability
